

Constructing A Lab of One's Own

I will discuss the challenges in navigating the university and international collaborations in experimental particle physics in order to make sustained scientific contribution, and the importance of having “a lab of one’s own” to allow for independent thinking and general well-being.

Dr. Melissa Franklin
Chair of Physics
Harvard University